DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yamamoto'104.

The applied prior art reference to Yamamoto'104 teaches that it is well known in the art to make and use an electroconductive zinc oxide powder, wherein at least one additional element is present, the average particle size falls within the claimed size and the volume resistivity is within the claimed values. See abstract, column 1, lines 1-50, column 2, lines 25-32, column 44-51, column 28-40, column 5, lines 55-68, column 7, lines 1-30, and 38-53, column 8, lines 7-35, and 40-50.

The prior art reference teaches the claimed steps in producing powders including claimed temperature ranges.

The applied reference does not specifically teach the claimed bulk density or the claimed amount of the additional element. However, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to optimize the bulk density of the powder as well as the amount of the additional element in the composition since such would improve conductive properties of the powder. Also, it would have been obvious to use such powders in electroconductive composition since such is considered a common practice in industry.
